From IAMAW – Statute

Article I: Name and Concept ... IAMAW is an international non-profit scientific association, working in the public interest with only social solidarity objectives in the sector of instruction, training and RTD, to boost issues related to treatment and recycling of Mediterranean waste streams and by-products of agro-industrial activities, in an environmental-sensitive manner. The term Mediterranean refers to climatic/edaphic condition and not to geographic location. The Association is established for an indefinite period of time and it will not promote and perform activities different from those listed in the statute and closely related to it.

Article II: Objectives The objectives of IAMAW are: to foster environmental solutions for agro-industrial, forestry and municipal organic by-products, residues, waste and effluents through reduction, treatment, reuse and amelioration; to promote scientific research in the above-mentioned fields; to organize working groups that will advance knowledge and expertise through knowledge exchange; to promote knowledge dissemination and transfer of know-how among members, end-users, stakeholders and to the scientific world, mainly through professional conferences and symposia; to improve and demonstrate the feasibility and economic sustainability of the proposed solutions; to create working relations in order to foster international research with institutes/scientists working in the field beyond the Mediterranean region and to access financial and technology resources; ... to assist policy-makers in defining more rational and uniform laws and regulations in the field of Mediterranean waste management and in the identification of Best Available Technologies (BAT).

Article III – Activities The Association will: 1. Hold International Congresses at regular intervals ...2. Arrange international workshops and symposia as well as other international meetings. 3. Establish Working Groups according to the main scientific disciplines involved in its scope of interests. 4. Form relationships and cooperate with other governmental and nongovernmental organizations in its field of interest. 5. Edit, produce and distribute information, reports and scientific or technical publications, reserving the exclusive rights and copyrights to the Association according to Italian law. 6. Use other legal means to achieve the objectives of the Association. 7. To the aim of collect money through no-profit actions, the association can perform minor economical activities according to the Italian d.m. del 25/5/1995 in the direction of pursue institutional objectives of the association without the use of professional tools developed for competing on the market.
